Hans H. Stadelmaier was born in Germany almost 89 years ago and spent part of his youth in the United States before returning to Germany prior to the outbreak of World War II. He served in the German Luftwaffe during World War II. After the war, he studied physics at the Technical University in Stuttgart and earned his doctorate at the Max Planck Institute. Dr. Stadelmaier accepted a position in the Engineering Research Department of North Carolina State University. His research interests are many and include X-ray crystallography, phase diagrams, and magnetic materials. He advised, guided, and befriended countless associates, graduate and undergraduate students during his career with the university.

Dr. Stadelmaier has been with North Carolina State University since the early 1950's and is a founding member of the Carolinas Central Chapter (founded in 1952 as the Carolinas Chapter including North and South Carolina). He was elected a Fellow of ASM International in 1978 and was awarded the Albert Easton White Distinguished Teacher Award from ASM in 2006. Several of Dr. Stadelmaier's students (Cedric Beachem and Dr. Anna Fraker) have been elected as ASM Fellows due to their significant contributions to materials science during their careers. Please join us as we celebrate Dr. Stadelmaier's contributions to the university, to ASM, to the Carolinas Central Chapter, to materials science, and to our lives and careers.

The meeting will take place at the University Club on September 22, 2011 at 6:00 p.m.
