Description: Are you curious about the minority experience in law school or in the legal profession? Are you thinking about applying to Carolina Law? Do you have questions about the application process? Do you want to hear from current and past Carolina Law students or learn about financing a legal education? If so, we invite you to join us on Friday, February 15, 2008 for Minority Law Day hosted by the Office of Admissions.

Check-in will begin at 8:15 a.m. in the Law School Rotunda, and the program will begin promptly at 9:00 a.m. This open house, planned with minority applicants in mind, will include an overview of the admissions process presented by the Assistant Dean for Admissions, Michael States, followed by a discussion on financing a legal education. In addition, current and past Carolina Law students will share their experiences and answer your questions. The event will end with optional tours of the law school and library, and we will conclude around 3:00 p.m. We are happy to provide you with a light breakfast and lunch at the event.

If you would like to join us for Minority Law Day, please RSVP by February 10, 2008 by sending an e-mail to law_admissions@unc.edu. Please include your name and telephone number in the e-mail and include "Minority Law Day" in the subject line.
