Dear Prospective Legal Eagle:

On behalf of North Carolina Central University School of Law, the Student Bar Association and the Native American Law Students Association, we are extending an invitation for you to attend Native American Student Recruitment Day on October 14, 2009.

Founded in 1939, North Carolina Central University School of law was one of the first universities in the state to open its doors to American Indian students. As such, NCCU School of Law has accumulated a growing alumni base of American Indian legal professionals. During its 70 years of existence, North Carolina Central University School of Law has been a proud leader amongst area universities in promoting diversity. Throughout the years, the University has continued to recognize the importance of providing a quality legal education to all students with particular emphasis on the importance of service in our community.

By attending the Native American Student Recruitment Day on October 14, 2009, you will be afforded an opportunity to experience a day in the life of a Legal Eagle. You will sit in on actual first-year law courses. Additionally, you will hear from the law school Admissions Office, as well as, the law school Financial Aid and Scholarships Office. There will also be a professionalism session which will address resumes and networking. During lunch you will hear from currently enrolled students about their experiences in law school as well as representatives from the law school Administration. The day will conclude with attendance in an upper-level law course on Native American Law.

In order to adequately prepare for your participation in this event, we ask that you R.S.V.P. by email to: NALSAatNCCU@gmail.com by Wednesday, September 20, 2009 at 5:00 p.m. In the event you have questions regarding the program, please feel free to contact me by email at: NALSAatNCCU@gmail.com or phone at: 919.623.8644.

Very truly yours,
